Demand driving the development of healthier food products: Minister

Portfolio: Health

29/4/02

Western Australian food manufacturers are responding to strong consumer demand for healthy food products, Health Minister Bob Kucera said at the presentation of the 2002 WA Nutrition Awards today.

Fourteen West Australian companies have been recognised for producing innovative and healthy food products.

"More and more companies are realising the benefits of providing low-fat, nutritious products," Mr Kucera said.

"The businesses represented here today recognise that these products make good business sense and they are to be congratulated for developing food products that are lower in salt and fat."

A recent Department of Health survey found that on any given day, one in three WA adults purchase meals prepared outside the home.

Mr Kucera said nutrition was a high priority for Western Australians.

"The survey tells us that 85 per cent of people said it was important to be able to have the option of choosing healthy food when buying a meal," he said.

"More than half the respondents said they often tried to choose healthy foods when buying a meal.

"These results highlight the demand in the community and the potential for businesses to supply the best food to meet the demands of a large number of Western Australians.

"The award winners have developed products that have been recognised by the Department of Health as meeting set criteria indicating that they are tasty, healthy, safe and produced in WA.

"All companies who receive the award also assist the community by supporting FOODBANK of WA, which provides emergency food relief for families in crisis."
